Webber argued that the way forward from Modernity into Postmodernity would be to discover an ancient-future faith. This would be ancient, in that it invites emerging Christians into the patterns of worship of the historical church: the Christian year, lectionary readings, reading/enacting God's story through liturgy, and spiritual disciplines. This transcendent piece roots Christ-followers in the ancient story of the Scriptures and places us in continuity with the early church.

Maybe one of, if not the best book by Webber - at least in the Ancient-Future series. The others are all above par, but this one is concise, readable, and points toward worship as a retelling of the story and message of God. Worship is proclamation and remembering in behaviors, Word, and sacrament.
