Guadalupe Garcia McCall (Author of Under the Mesquite)

My name is Guadalupe Garcia McCall, but most people call me Loop. I like to sit on my porch, listen to the sounds of nature, and write stories about the complexities and magic of growing up.
When I write, I think about how important and valuable life and all of its experiences are, so I try to write stories that give meaning to those experiences.

Guadalupe Garcia McCall - Wikipedia
So begins Guadalupe Garcia McCall's debut book, a novel in free verse that describes Lupita's coming of age. The verses include the longing for Mexico even as their family puts down roots (and plants roses bushes amid which a stubborn mesquite thrives) in Texas, Lupita's discovery of drama class and poetry, and her mother's cancer.
