The simple
answer is yes,
pilots do and
are allowed to
sleep during

flight but there are strict rules controlling this practice. Pilot rest can be separated into two categories; 'Controlled Rest' where the pilot sleeps whilst in the cockpit at the controls or 'Bunk Rest' where sleep or rest is taken either in the passenger cabin (in a seat reserved for the pilots) or in the dedicated pilot bunks available on long haul aircraft.
